

EDITORIAL

“Research is formalised curiosity. It is poking and prying with a purpose.”

– Zora Neale Hurston

The underlying cause of all the researches that have ever been carried out in this world is the human being's eternal quest for facts, or for the truth, as they call it. In pursuit of the very truth, the scientists of the Council have been working ever since the establishment of this organisation. Thirty one years hence, we have reached a level where the dissemination of our researches, is not only a matter of pride, but also an imperative responsibility, in the best interest of the humanity at large.

Central Council of Research in Homoeopathy has 23 institutes and units, which conduct researches in various ways. In the face of ever-changing medical technology, the Council has tried to raise its standards of research to keep at pace with the scientific world. The technical officers of the institutes and units are made to undergo training from time to time, in order to keep them abreast with the latest adoptions in the field of research. This journal makes a sincere attempt to publish the work of these officers, but not before their submissions are reviewed and accredited by the experts.

Inside, you will find yourself getting absorbed in a range of research-oriented papers that either add to or question the existing knowledge on various topics.

It is my earnest desire that through this journal, we bring the most useful and reliable information for the benefit of the homoeopathic profession and also play our part in igniting interest for research amongst the homoeopathic neophytes.

Prof. C. Nayak
Editor-in-Chief